What features of programming languages interfere with the use of programming theory?
In what way do they interfere?